My take

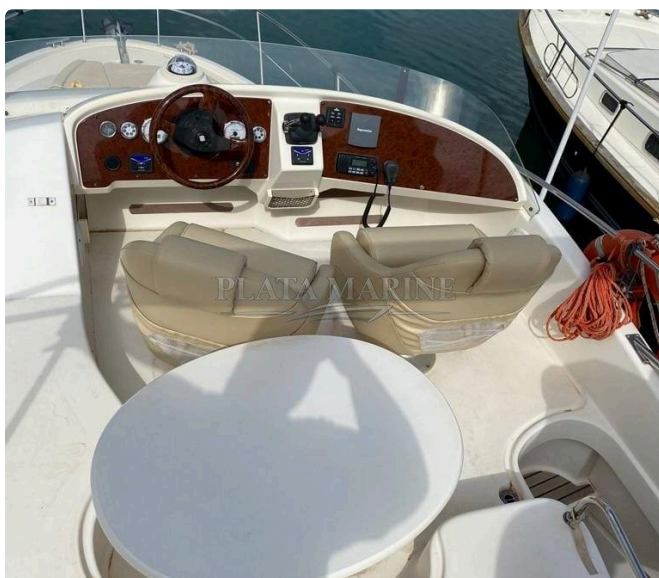

A 2006 Jeanneau Prestige 32, the model that made the French yard's range of compact flybridge boats famous: a 10.65-metre boat that handles like a small one and lives like a big one. It has two helm positions, inside and up on the flybridge, which has a bimini and room for everyone on board to sit up top.

It is powered by a single Volvo Penta D4 260 hp diesel with around 1,500 hours, a well-known engine with good service support all along the coast. One engine means less maintenance and lower fuel consumption than a twin, and for hopping between islands or cruising the coast it has plenty in hand.

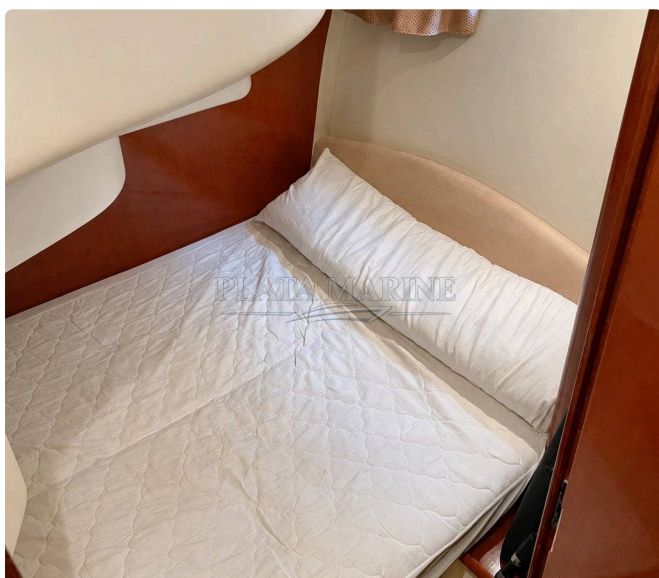

Below there is a saloon with table, sofa and galley, two cabins (the forward cabin and a second cabin with a television) and a full heads compartment. The photos show well-kept upholstery and woodwork, and the bathing platform with the davits and the tender with its outboard, which is what makes the difference when you anchor in a cove.

Who I see it suiting is a couple or a family wanting a boat for weekends and holidays around the Balearics, with a proper cabin and a flybridge to enjoy the trip. It can be skippered with the Spanish PER or a higher qualification. It is in Menorca and can be viewed by appointment. The price is €89,000, and as it is a private sale there is no VAT.
